Subject: NHS car park costs

REQUEST

I am an intern at the BBC, working on the Inside Out North West programme. We are doing a piece that is interested in looking at how much money hospital trusts make through hospital car parks.

It would be great if you could give me figures on parking charges and fines that have been made to patients; visitors and staff, each year for the past 10 years [January 2009 to now].

I will be asking the same question to other NHS trusts in the North West. If you require further clarification, please get in touch.

RESPONSE

All income is retained by the Trust to cover the direct costs of providing safe, secure car parking. The Trust makes no profit from the revenue from car parks, but seeks to ensure that car parking is self-financing and doesn't require any subsidy from funds provided for patient care.
